CONCEPT NOTE & CALL FOR PAPERS

‘Cooperatives: Key for Achieving Sustainable Development Goals’

The United Nations General Assembly has recently adopted a resolution declaring 2025 as the International Year of Cooperatives. This resolution highlights the pivotal role of cooperatives in achieving Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and advancing global social and economic development.

The resolution urges member states and stakeholders to utilize 2025 as an opportunity to raise awareness about the contributions of co-operatives. It emphasizes their impact on various development areas, including decent employment, poverty eradication, education, social protection, financial inclusion, and the creation of affordable housing. In addition, member states are encouraged to review and enhance existing legislation to create a supportive environment for cooperative growth. This includes addressing key factors such as access to capital, autonomy, competitiveness, and fair taxation.

The 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development recognizes “the role of the diverse private sector, ranging from micro-enterprises to cooperatives to multinational corporations” in its implementation.

Cooperatives are recognized as important partners to achieve the SDGs, because they promote democracy, enhance income, foster social inclusion, care for the environment, and have a significant economic impact on the economy. Self-help and empowerment, enhancing local resources and capacities and reinvesting surpluses guide cooperatives to respond to local community needs and objectives. Cooperative enterprises support and promote a vision of Sustainable Development based on a triple bottom line approach: economic, social, and environmental.

Cooperatives in India have been making vital contributions in achieving UN Sustainable Development Goals. In the recent years, the cooperative movement has emerged as a formidable sector of economy in the wake of initiatives taken by the government to strengthen the cooperative movement. The 54 initiatives of Ministry of Cooperation (see the initiatives on Initiatives of Ministry of Cooperation) have provided further opportunities to cooperatives to emerge as lead players in achieving Sustainable Development Goals.
